

What each cosmological length can reach before its ladder floor

The power law collapses in cosmological time; only the shortest length reaches the exponential before its floor

